A Correction.

In the article on "Paternalism," the word "Farm" was inserted before the word "Bureau," giving it an entirely different meaning than the writer intended. I have been a member of the Farm Bureau since its organization and the article as originally written carried no criticism of the Farm Bureau.

Certain bureaus and boards are necessary, others are created for the sole purpose of giving politicians soft jobs. Now if we are going to reduce state expenses it will be absolutely necessary to differentiate sharply between the two and to eliminate the useless.

F. E. Simpson.

His talk was scholarly and well delivered, his theme bringing out the thought that God has a knowledge He wants us to have but He wants us to recognize God. Men too often follow after the things created instead of the creator of the thing. He mentioned several world leaders whom God has raised up and has given knowledge to lead and direct in times of doubt and despair. Mr. Cooper is one of Barton's young men of whom it may well be proud.
